Forecast For Highland & Eilean Siar
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Thursday 11 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A very cold start but largely dry and bright.

Today:
After a very cold start to the day it will be mainly dry with a lot of winter sunshine around. Strengthening winds later in the day and just the chance of a few snow showers for Caithness in the afternoon. Maximum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Tonight:
Another cold night but temperatures not as cold as of late with strong winds. Caithness most likely to see any showers and more in the way of cloud here too. Minimum temperature -10 deg C (14 deg F).

Friday:
A windy day but generally dry with plenty of sunshine, perhaps clouding over in the Hebrides later and gales possible here too. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Becoming cloudier and periods of patchy snow will feed into the west on Saturday, further rain and snow spreading east on Sunday. Very windy with gales at times. Brighter Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.